

As women, we are swamped by so many responsibilities and in our busy schedules we are overstretched, wearing far too many caps. This deprives us of the opportunity to hear God's voice. Many of us are even imprisoned in our own minds, without hope or direction. We are unable to connect with our inner selves and that alone deters us from responding to our calling and fulfilling our purposes. Many even fail to recognize divine opportunities purposefully designed to steer them in the direction of their destiny.

I am enough in Christ proved to be a best seller. Launched in January 2017, it has given birth to a mini tool – I am enough in Christ for women – which provides a framework set to inspire and encourage women to be intentional in their journey of transformation.

Mtshali-Dlamini is a child of God by divine grace. A speaker, a teacher of the Word and a facilitator of note, her background is education, having served the Department of Education for 18 years as a secondary school teacher, lecturer and education specialist. Her buzz words are destiny, impact, transformation and intentionality as the core ingredients of purposeful living. She opens minds and touches hearts with biblically-based principles of inner healing and personal empowerment. This book will invoke a thirst for growth that will enable you to sparkle.
